Highlights of the Collection

Art. Goût. Beaut.

Launched in the mid 1920s, it contained some drawings printed in color, and some painted by hand and pasted to the leaves, illustrating the work of Paris dressmakers and milliners. It was financed by a firm of textile manufacturers, A.G.B. (Albert Godde, Bedin et Cie.)

La Belle assemblée

Important British fashion magazine named after its founder, John Bell. With monochrome plates it cost half-a-crown, with color a shilling extra.

Gazette du bon ton (later called Gazette du bon genre)

Hand coloring had almost died out when it was revived by the Gazette du bon ton, 1912-1920s. It contained line engravings tinted with watercolors by artists including Georges Lepape, Georges Barbier, Maurice Taquoy, Pierre Brissaud, Andre Marty, Raoul Dufy and Georges Benda. It depicted the models of a select coterie, including Paul Poiret.

Journal des dames et des modes

Named after an illustrious predecessor that ran from 1797 to 1839, the Journal des dames et des modes that appeared in June 1912 did not survive the outbreak of the war beginning in August 1914. It was a luxury magazine for an exclusive clientele; only 1279 copies of each issue were printed. The text of fashionable poetry and fashion notes was written by contributors such as Anatole France, Jean Cocteau and Comtesse de Noailles. Each issue was accompanied by fashion plates with the standard heading, "Costumes Parisiens," including illustrations by Georges Barbier, Leon Bakst, Pierre Legrain, Etienne Drian, and many others.

Pochoir

Pochoir is the French word for stencil and the process it involves. Pochoir was a French specialty that flowered particularly during the art nouveau and art deco periods in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Stenciling was a technique by which an artist could make any number of originals of the same work. Many fashion magazines were hand colored by the pochoir process over black and white lines produced by wood engravings, etchings, lithography or printing. Examples of pochoir in our collection are included in the Gazette du bon ton, La Guirlande--album mensuel d'art et de litterature, and Trés parisien.

Fashion photography

La Mode pratique from 1892 to 1894 may have been the first journal to make use of fashion photography. Photographs of models were heavily touched up and tinted by hand, and then printed in a two-color process. Photography came into its own at the beginning of the 20th century with Les Modes, founded in 1901. Studio pictures were predominant, often embellished by coloring applied to the negative.
